

"My art is based on the evolution and devolution of life's wonders"

Artist Statement

The work is based on the evolution and devolution of our environs. This includes the interplay of geology, geography, products of the human hand, and our current (computer) pixilated lifestyle.

My art addresses the harmony and chaos that often erupts from the above mentioned mix. The current series, Magma Chambers, speak of the hot and cold precarious place our planet is in.

Structure, form and color, love of the countryside, as well as a lifetime of Brooklyn living: all are my building blocks.

Each piece is made of multiple fired stoneware clay. The clay sculptured forms are used as a canvas for built up color in clay and glaze. Often rocks, gravel and paper are used as well.

Thoughtful planning, followed by the work process delivers the art. The question of what we seem to be and who we really are, is evident in the nature of each piece. Fronts and backs, insides and outsides; all related - and all significantly different.

Meticulous care is taken so that each work extends an unspoken invitation to look and look again. The desire to touch is hard to deny.
